

Mr. Powell,

This letter is to provide personal input regarding your investigation into the SuperBowl Half-time show. I do not support CBS being absolved of responsibility in this incident. I recognize that the final moment of the show may have been unrehearsed, but the remainder of the program was obviously not intended for younger viewers. CBS had the opportunity to view rehearsals and chose to show this during the time frame known as "family programming" knowing the standards set out by the FCC. Had CBS taken the opportunity to utilize the rating system used during any of their other programming, some viewers would have taken that input and removed their children from the viewing area. It is my opinion that CBS still is accountable for the lack of judgement they showed while they made these choices.

I have forwarded my comment to CBS about not utilizing the programming rating system to them. If, however, they did utilize that system and I failed to see it, please let me know.

Sincerely,

Anita G. Land
